Byrd's Reply to Barkley

A Distinguished Speech in the Senate

In today's mail we have the speech that Senator Harry F. Byrd, Virginia Democrat, delivered in the senate March 31 on union labor, national unity, and "sixth column activity." In its magnificent scope and stirring appeal it outranks anything that the printed page might offer today — and we give it to you in full. Senator Byrd:

Fight of Tanks, Men Raging on Leningrad Front

Russians Declare 25,000 Germans Killed in Last Three Weeks

By the Associated Press

A heavy battle of tanks and men with the combat tempo rising with every hour that passes was reported raging on the Leningrad front Friday and the Russians declared 25,000 German troops had been killed and huge war supplies captured in 13 days of fighting around the old Czarist capital and at neighboring Staraya Russa.

It was not immediately clear whether Russia was making a major attempt to break out of the long-besieged northern metropolis or whether the Germans were on the offensive hoping to knock out that long besieged barrier.

The Leningrad radio reported that Red army troops had captured a fortified settlement which served as a center for several German-held villages.

Adolf Hitler's field headquarters reported a noticeable lessening of the great winter drive.

The German command claimed its Navy had sunk 36 warships including a British cruiser and 8 destroyers during February and March.

"Another 37 warships including 10 cruisers, 11 destroyers and 5 submarines were damaged in offensive operation by German naval forces and in air attacks by the Luftwaffe," the Nazi command said.

In aerial warfare RAF night bombers returned to the assault on German war factories in the suburbs of Paris attacking the Matford truck works for the second straight night while the Nazi raiders pounded "hells corner" on the southeast English coast.

The Germans said Dover and Portland were the chief targets.

British observers said the fury of the Nazi moonlight assault indicated that Hitler's command was fearful of the renewal of British commando invasion thrusts and attempting to break up potential commando bases.

First Aid to the Farmers

Will Be Fashion for Senior Girl Scout This Summer

Wide World Features

Farming will be fashion for Senior Girl Scout campers (ages 15 to 18) this summer. Chance are that a farmer who finds himself short of farmhands can go either to his county agent or to a nearby Girl Scout camp to get volunteers ready to reap a harvest of food crops or assist otherwise in a farmhouse or outdoors.

Plans for the Scouts to offer their services as farm aides will be made in each community to fit local needs. The girls will be accompanied by their troop leader or by a camp counselor and will work under the supervision of the farmer or foreman.

In some cases camps will be set up on farms so that the girls can assist the farmer in outdoor crops a certain number of hours every day.

Present plans call for outdoor work to include the same types of things Swedish Girl Scouts were doing in 1940: milking, berry picking, beet chopping, garden work, hedge clipping, weeding vegetables or assisting in getting fruit or vegetables ready for canning.

Bloody Battle at Fort Dix Leaves 3 Dead

Five Others Injured When Negro, White Soldiers Shoot It Out

FORT DIX, N. J. — (AP) — White and negro soldiers fought a bloody 15-minute battle on the darkened plains of Fort Dix Thursday night in which 3 soldiers were shot to death and 5 others fell in furious exchange of bullets.

The sudden bitter outburst ended when negro and white officers appeared and ordered the embattled white military police and the negro enlisted men to cease firing.

Scenes of military police had been hastened to lay siege to the barracks housing negro troops from which Major George Waldie said a fusillade of shots had answered a bullet fired over the head of a fleeing negro soldier.

The battle termed by Major Waldie, post public relations officer, was the first manifestation of ill feeling and flared from a dispute in a nearby amusement center over a "next" on a telephone.

An M. P. stationed at the place attempted to halt an argument and had words with a negro soldier who lunged or the M. P.'s pistol, ripping the holster but failing to grasp the weapon. The negro ran outside and the M. P. fired after he had told the negro to halt.

This brought forth a fusillade from the barracks across the roadway from the amusement center.

The summoned M. P.'s were deployed on the open spaces fronting the barracks. More than 50 bullets were fired before the shooting ended.

The dead: Private Manie W. Strough, white, of Honeycreek, Va., an M. P.; Pvt. Isaac W. Brown, negro, of Henderson, Tenn.; Cpl. W. E. Hall, negro, no address given.

The injured, none seriously, were Cpl. Millott E. Hammond, no address; Pvt. Evans Webber, Pinkley Road, John T. Robinson, no addresses and I. V. Martin, Greenwood, Miss., all negroes.

Proving Ground to Hold Open House April 5

Public Invited to Project's Army Day Observance Sunday

Lt. Colonel Keith F. Adamson announced Friday that the Southwestern Proving Ground would hold open house on Sunday, April 5, between the hours of 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. as its contribution to the nationwide observance of Army Day.

Although Army Day is not until April 6, it was pointed out that to hold an open house on that date would impede the way work going on at the proving ground.

Many citizens of Hope and the surrounding territory have long been curious as to what changes the War Department has made in Hempstead county's fertile countryside. This opportunity to view the most changed part of the proving ground will satisfy that curiosity.

Those who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity will enter and leave the proving ground by the main gate which is located on what was formerly the Hope-Blevins highway. Once inside the proving ground all passengers must remain in the automobiles and all automobiles must be kept moving. Cars will travel along a prescribed route and guards will be stationed at all intersections to see that cars follow this route.

In order to avoid congestion in entering and leaving the reservation, all visitors are cautioned not to take with them any cameras or firearms, since these articles will not be permitted on the reservation.

Easter Display at Exp. Station

Ornamental Gardens to be on Display Sunday Afternoon

The grounds and ornamental gardens of the University of Arkansas, Fruit Truck Branch Experiment Station, will be on display, Easter Sunday afternoon, April 5, from 2 to 5 p. m. to accommodate the large number of visitors who normally visit the station on this occasion, according to an announcement made by George W. Ware, assistant director, in charge of the station. Visitors will be shown informally over the campus and through the nurseries which contain a great number of ornamental plants and horticultural arrangements.

The experiment station has cancelled all of its spring visiting days on account of the fire situation, and the Sunday afternoon pilgrimage will afford interested persons an opportunity to see the station. As usual the general public is invited.

Corners of Tracts Outside SPG Fence Not for Sale

Some 2,300 acres of land, leftover corners of tracts which the government bought but did not use in the Southwestern Proving Ground project, will not be sold this year, H. B. Grace, head of the War Department's real estate branch announced Friday.

However, the tracts will be leased to farmers for cultivation, the land board announced. These pieces are located just outside the Proving Ground fence.

Leasing bids will be received immediately at the real estate office in the Hempstead county courthouse.

Etter Seeking No. 1 Rep. Post

Becomes Candidate for Post of Talbot Field, Jr.

William H. Etter, young business man of Washington and Hope, today makes announcement of his candidacy for Representative Post No. 1, which is the legislative seat held by Talbot Field, Jr., who has announced he will not be a candidate to succeed himself.

The candidate has been publisher of the Washington newspaper for the past nine years, and is also in the commercial printing business in Hope. He has, also, to some extent been in the real estate business for a number of years.

A native of the county, he is the son of the late W. H. Etter, one-time county judge and former law partner of the late L. F. Monroe. He is a graduate of the Washington and Hope High Schools, and has considerable training in law, although he is not an attorney. He is 33, a Presbyterian and a Mason, is married and has two small daughters.

He was employed by the State of Arkansas in the 1941 session of the General Assembly to write and compile the record of proceedings of the Senate, which post is excellent training for the legislative post he is seeking. By training and business experience he is fully qualified to represent Hempstead county in the legislature.

In announcing his candidacy, Mr. Etter said: "I am not going at this time to outline any stand on any particular issues that may arise in the next session of the legislature, because we, at this time, due to the war, do not know what problems may come before the 1943 General Assembly; however, I do promise a stand in all questions directed toward more economy in state government, and that I will, if elected, represent the people of Hempstead county fairly, honestly, and to the best of my ability."

The candidate asks your consideration of his candidacy and solicits your vote the coming Democratic elections.

Baptists Plan Special Service

Sunday's Program Announced by Rev. Hamilton

The morning service at First Baptist, opening at 10:30, will center around the two Scriptural Ordinances of Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The evangelistic message in the Sunday School will be followed by the evangelistic invitation at the opening of the worship service. This will lead up to the baptism of a few of these who have accepted Christ in the last few weeks or in the morning service. Then, following special music and the offering, the Lord's Supper will be administered with special emphasis upon its reference to Resurrection.

The evening service will be devoted to special cantata music interspersed with appropriate Scriptural sections and comments by the pastor. Preparations are being made to accommodate large crowds of worshippers in the

Enemy Trapped After Attack on Bataan Line

With Invasion Threat From Burma India Still Wrangles

By the Associated Press

On long-besieged Bataan Peninsula Lt. Gen. Wainwright's American and Filipino fighters were officially reported mopping up pocketed Japanese units which Thursday burst through the two main lines in two heavy assaults.

The War Department communiqué said "a considerable number of Japanese got through only to be trapped as U. S. troops counter attacked fiercely and sealed the gap."

With Japanese invasion threatening from Burma leaders of India's millions still wrangled bitterly over Britain's proposal to grant India self-rule after the war in return for fighting support. Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek was said to have intervened in negotiations urging India to accept the British proposals.

Chiang Sends Message

Chiang was said to have sent a special messenger to convey his views to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, powerful former president of the All-India Congress Party.

A spokesman for India's 43 million untouchables were among the latest to express opposition. They were quoted as saying the proposal would tend to place the depressed classes under a system of Hindu rule.

Thompson Runs for No. 2 Rep.

Seeks Legislative Post Held by Weisenberger

Emory A. Thompson, well known Hempstead county planter, and former legislator, makes announcement this week that he is a candidate for representative, Post No. 2, which is the post vacated by Royce Weisenberger.

Mr. Thompson is known to practically all citizens of the county. He has been a resident since 1913 and has carried on extensive farming operations during that time. He was elected to the legislature in 1934, serving in the 50th Session of the Assembly which convened in January, 1935.

In announcing as a candidate for this office Mr. Thompson said that he is doing so because of the resignation of the two present legislators, and he believes that his previous experience in the legislature can be of value to the people of the county during the 1943 session.

Mr. Thompson was a resident of Dois 'd Arc township when he made his former race. Since then he has built a home on Highway 67 southwest of Hope, on Route 4 and is a resident of Watereck township.

The candidate asks that the voters of the county give due consideration to his past experience and other qualifications when making their decision as to who will represent them in the next session of the General Assembly. He will appreciate your vote and support in the August 11 Democratic primary election.

AAA Cotton Plan Changed

Program in Hempstead to Aid War Effort

A change in the method of computing cotton acreage diversion in order to protect cotton history for farms on which plantings of American-Egyptian cotton in adapted areas, soybeans and peanuts for oil as a part of the USDA War Board's program, has been announced by E. N. Martindale, chairman of the Hempstead county Triple-A committee.

Diverted cotton acreage is the difference between the highest planted plus diverted cotton acreage during any of the three previous years and the acreage planted to cotton in the present year with the maximum diverted acreage being limited to half of the highest planted and diverted acreage. Diverted acreage is a part of the cotton history of a farm which is an important factor in determining cotton acreage allotments.

Under the change, increased plantings of American-Egyptian cotton, soybeans and peanuts for oil will

Animals Should Have Care in Heavy Season

Horses, Mules Are Subject to Much Work in Next 6 Weeks

A heavy load of work will be thrown on horses and mules during the next six weeks, according to Oliver L. Adams, county agent, who urges farmers to handle and feed their animals carefully in order to maintain their efficiency and avoid injuries and deaths.

The county agent pointed out that more plowing and preparation is necessary this year to prepare for production of greater acreages of food crops; that weather conditions have delayed plowing and seedbed preparation; and that there are fewer tractors because some farmers failed to get parts.

For efficient work, the county agent said a team should move through the field at the rate of 2 1/2 miles per hour. If the normal draft of the plow or harrow is too much for two or three horses moving at that rate, then more horses should be added.

Proper feeding will increase the efficiency of the work stock, the county agent said. Generally, one to 1 1/4 pounds of grain and one pound of hay are required for each 100 live weight of the animal. Horses wintered on hay should gradually be accustomed to grain over a period of 2 or 3 weeks before work starts. The grain is fed in three equal feedings—morning, noon, and night. At least half of the hay allowance should be fed at night, and the other half divided between the morning and noon feedings. On idle days the grain allowance should be cut in half.

To avoid shoulder injuries, a good, heavy leather collar, properly fitted, should be used regularly on each horse. Sweat pads are not recommended.

Washing the shoulders with water, to which a small amount of salt has been added, helps to toughen the shoulders and avoid galling.

that if the 40-hour week interferes with production, that it be repealed; that if the constant bickerings between capital and labor interfere with production, that the preceding Peck-Harbor to do those things necessary to our national defense; to prevent strikes in defense industries; the failure to appoint a single head of our war production effort, and to end the fantastic confusion which existed in Washington after the fall of France, which tragic event was a warning in unmistakable terms that this nation must be prepared to defend its liberties.

The nation was shocked by the recent speech made by the Honorable Nelson A. Rockefeller, Chairman of the War Production Board, who said that we were now operating only on a 50 percent war production basis, when, on practically the same day, Sir Stafford Cripps said in England that after more than two and a half years of war, when millions of their able-bodied men were engaged in war, that Germany had reached the highest level of its war production.

"Instead of condemning those back home who have exercised their Constitutional right of free speech, we should commend them for their courage in the effort to remove any and all obstacles to the successful prosecution of the war, I think that these citizens deserve the commendation and the approval of all America. At least, it shows that they are not complacent; that they are not living in a fool's paradise, as has so often been stated by officials of our Government. It is a healthy sign, which shows that the people are deeply concerned, it shows that they want to win this war, it shows that they are willing to make the sacrifices to do so, it shows that they intend to control their own Government and lead it along the path of a more vigorous and successful prosecution of the war, which is only possible by tremendously increasing our present production of military equipment.

Of course, know that there has been some misunderstanding and misinformation on both sides of those who contend that our present war effort is adequate and those who contend that it is not; but the American people, with that clear vision which preserves great democracies in an hour of desperate peril, know that everything is not right in our war production program, that we have not and are not going forward in this program as rapidly as we should, that the obstacles must be removed and this action they are demanding of those in authority. The American people believe that there is only one great task before our Republic to-day and that is to win this war, and that every activity of our people and of the Government must be subordinated to this one purpose.

I think, Mr. President, it is the duty of congress to meet these issues squarely and to take the best action that may be dictated by the sole and single purpose of winning this war. I firmly believe that it is the duty of congress to adopt a definite labor policy and that such a policy, as adopted by congress, is the only way to stop the constant bickerings and jealousies that exist between capital and labor.

I think that we should proceed with the consideration of the Connally bill which, as the leader of the senate said yesterday, would be open to amendments covering all phases of the labor situation and these could be discussed on their merits and a proper conclusion arrived at.

The fact that important labor legislation, passed by the House of Representatives, has been suppressed in the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, has not made a wholesome impression upon the American people. The Senate should have the right to pass on these House bills one way or the other. The fact that the effort is being made to prevent the consideration of the Connally bill, instead of adding to the unity of the country is adding to its disunity. I think, too, that it is the duty of congress to pass legislation to prohibit exorbitant profits on war contracts and this can be considered in connection with the Connally bill.

By WILLIS THORNTON
His Words Match
His Deeds

Soldiers are supposed to fight not talk. Eloquence, generally speaking, has little place as men face cannon-hurled death. The deed, not the say, wins the medals and decorations. Yet time and again men have leaped to victory with a cry on their lips. Phrases have fired a nation—"Remember the Alamo," "Surrender, hell, we haven't begun to fight," "Give me liberty, or give me death," "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead."

Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg thought "the world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here." His words still ring, but the battle rages only in history books. Now we have a man whose words echo his daring, whose phrases slash as did his men on Bataan. Here's proof that the MacArthur's magnificence shines not only on the battlefield.

"There shall be no compromise. We shall win or we shall die." To the Australian Parliament.

"Men will not fight and men will not die unless they know what they are fighting and dying for." Assuring reporters in Australia he would hold back only news valuable to the enemy.

"I came through and I shall return." Arriving in Australia from the Philippines.

"Take every other normal precaution for protection of the headquarters, but let keep the flag flying." Reply to officer insisting flag should be removed from Manila Army headquarters.

"Today, Jan. 30, 1942, the anniversary of your birth, smoke-begrimed men, covered with the marks of battle, rise from the foxholes of Bataan and the batteries of Corregidor to pray reverently that God may bless immeasurably the President of the United States." Birthday message to President Roosevelt.

"Only those are fit to live who are not afraid to die." To a West Point graduating class.

"This job will last a long time." After marriage to Jean Faircloth.

"I shall lead the patrol to let the boys know that somebody at headquarters is willing to go with them." Reply to officer in 1918 who tried to keep him from going over the top.

"Americans never quit." Ordering U. S. boxing team back into competition at 1928 Olympic Games after coach withdrew team in protest over a decision.

"Very well if we lose 3000 men, we lose 3001." When warned in France that a certain operation would result in 3000 casualties.

"I shall keep the soldier's faith." Assuming command of United Nations' forces in Southwest Pacific.

Here then stands a man who can and has and will back up his words with his fists. The enemy knows the sting of those fists and he's felt the lash of that tongue. Yet it can be as gentle as a mother. He talks with the simplicity of Lincoln, but those common, straight-forward words drive deeper than the oratorical blasts of a hundred sunshine patriots.

As an Australian reported put it, "He is not only a first-class thinker and fighter but a fine speaker. When you hear him, you may not remem-

Gin Rummy for the Masses

But Not for Mr. Peacock, Who Should Stay Home

By RAY PEACOCK
Wide World Features Writer

NEW YORK — There is a story told in the ale houses of a certain prince who, upon discovering the joys of kizink a maiden, declared kissing illegal among common people on the grounds that it was too good for them.

That attitude, unfortunately, still prevails.

You all know how we were told some 10 years ago that we really were not having fun playing auction bridge, that if we were to play bridge, it must be contract. And those of us who were forced to choose between going on with our careers, or putting everything aside in order to learn contract bridge, were forced to give up the game.

You Play It or Else
Now they've gone and done it with rummy. One plays gin rummy these days, or people begin writing sympathetic letters to one's husband, or one's wife, or one's — well, that's enough.

Let us, then, consider the origin, the veritable roots, of this game of gin rummy. Or, as it was known in the days when it belonged to the bourgeoisie, 3-3-4 rummy, as distinguished from 3-3-3 or 3-4 rummy.

There were three rules to the game during this period, to wit: Draw, play, and discard. As such, the game was played in kitchens, up in Mabel's room, and around the corner at Joe's place. The loser bought, or was sent out for a dram of gin. This went on for years and nothing happened, no more than anything happens to dominos or Flinch or Authors.

They Can't Do This!
Research reveals that rummy was discovered by the patriars in Ogden, Utah, some time in 1940 or 1941 A. D. The simple, happy faces of the 3-3-4 rummy players were analyzed and typed, and it was determined by the clummiest that the proletariat was having too much fun with this chaste game and that something must be done about it.

A tentative book of rules made its appearance. It was some 24 pages long and created only scattered discussion. Another book, some 56 pages long and therefore twice as impressive, took its place. Scoring pads blossomed on the counters of the five-and-tens. A rapid calculator which could be mastered in a few months soon

Methodist Good Friday Service

Special Service to Be Held From 6 to 9 p. m.

The annual Good Friday Service at the First Methodist Church, Second and Pine Streets, will be held Friday night beginning at 6:00 and closing at 9:00.

This is really a series of seven twenty-minute services on the seven last words spoken by Christ from the cross. Each of these short services will include a solo, scripture, prayer, congregational singing, sermon and the Holy Communion.

There will be brief intermission periods at 6:30, 6:55, 7:20, 7:45, 8:10, and 8:35 when worshippers may enter and leave the sanctuary. The chimes will be played on the amplifier at these intermissions.

Go to Church Sunday

Window cards were placed in business houses this week by the Hope Ministerial Alliance, calling attention to Church Attendance as an essential of spiritual defense. Printed in red and blue ink on white cardboard, they read as follows:

Go to Church Sunday, America is at War! The Church is the Real First Line of Defense. You can contribute to the war effort by supporting the church with your presence every Sunday.

It was the influence of the church and our forefathers' faith in God that built America. It will be the continued influence of the church and our faith in God if America is saved. Join this great movement in its journey back to God and His House.

Eleven Members at U. D. C.

Meeting Monday
Mrs. Don Smith entertained the members of the Pat Clahorn chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at her home Thursday afternoon. Following the opening ritual the group sang Robert E. Lee's favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Wilbur Jones of Ozan.

For the occasion the Smith home was artistically decorated with azaleas and jonquils. Mrs. H. E. J. Garrett, the president presided at the brief business session.

A program on "Washington D. C." was presented by Mrs. H. C. Whitworth. Her introductory remarks were followed by a talk on Lee's home, Arlington by Mrs. A. E. Slusser.

Mrs. J. A. Henry conducted a quiz on the White House. A round table discussion of interesting places in the national capital was held.

During the social hour the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Dolphus Whitten, Sr. served a delicious sandwich course.

which carried out the Easter motif.

Miss Beryl Henry entertains Bay View Club at Home Ec Cottage. Various seasonal flowers in pastel shades decorated the Home Economics cottage at the high school Wednesday afternoon when Miss Beryl Henry was hostess to the Bay View Reading club.

Mrs. Gus Haynes, the president, presided at the business session and the minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Edwin Ward.

As program chairman for the afternoon, Miss Beryl Henry announced her topic to be "Our Commander in Chief." She reviewed the life of President Roosevelt, stressing the effect of early events of his life in molding his character.

Mrs. E. E. White continued the discussion with "Roosevelt as a Politician." For the basis of her talk she gave excerpts from his first inaugural address and the policies of his administration.

During the social hour the hostess assisted by Mrs. C. D. Lasater served a delightful desert plate. The Easter motif was observed in the dainty mints.

Personal Mention

Sunday School Lesson

Essential and Eternal Values of Life Considered in Relation to Immortality
Text: Mark 12:24-27; 1 Corinthians 15: 50-58.

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

This lesson consists of two passages, quoting two great authorities on life and death—Jesus, and His great disciple Paul. One is tempted to take the concluding sentence of the lesson, which begins with "wherefore" and is in the nature of a conclusion and put it first. Paul appeals in this conclusion to his beloved brethren to be "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not vain in the Lord."

Is not this the end and purpose of all assurance concerning the immortality of the soul and the life after death? Elsewhere Paul spoke once of the life that he had lived under persecution, stating bluntly that he "of all men most miserable" if there were to be no future life. What is involved here is not just a matter of human survival; it is a matter of

MEXICAN MASQUERADE

By CECIL CARNES

EXPLORATION

CHAPTER IX

"AH, now you misjudge me," protested Escobar quickly, and if his tone was equable, there was still a trace of red to color the clear olive skin of his cheeks. "As the officer responsible for this district, I have lately found it advisable to keep an eye on telegrams. A mild censorship, you see, quite unofficial and very extra-legal. The wire to you came through the San Saba office while I was there, and it was placed before me as a matter of routine—police routine, senior."

"I beg your pardon," said Allan, rising and holding out his hand to make it more convincing. "I should have remembered your official position and not spoken out of turn. With the whole world going to hell in a hock you are certainly justified in doing everything you can to keep this little corner of it peaceful."

"My sentiments exactly," nodded the Mexican, and gave a friendly pressure of his strong fingers to Allan's hand. "And now—you will excuse me, yes? Perhaps we shall have the pleasure of your company at dinner this evening."

His smiling, debonaire self again, he sauntered back to where his charming companion awaited him. Allan made a grimace at the treacherous telegram and stuck the thing in his pocket.

He gave some thought to the incident that afternoon when he wasn't wondering if the axles would snap or the radiator blow up. Whatever else Escobar might be, he was still the Government with a capital G in this neck of the woods and it made Allan a bit uncomfortable to think he might have become an object of suspicion to the police. It would be ruinous to his mission if he were slapped into the local hoosegow on charge of being a spy or fifth-columnist or something.

But the colonel had seemed quite good-humored about it, he tried to reassure himself, and if he really had serious doubts of Allan's bona fides he would hardly have tipped off his hand so openly about the "extra-legal" censorship. Moreover, his suggestion of dinner together had sounded cordial, and he had drifted away smiling.

Not that the smile meant much, mused Allan, dissuading the sedan from plunging into a clump of cholla cactus. Mexicans have a reputation for taking life easily, but they stand for no foolishness.

"Damn! efficient, these rurales!" muttered Allan. "The way he spotted that San Diego date-line—! Dammit, he's good!"

When his speedometer had jolted off nearly ten miles of highway hell, Allan slowed up and began to look about him for Sun Su's landmark. He discovered it presently, well off to the left of the road he was on and evidently quite near the shore of the Gulf. It was a steep little hill, perhaps thirty feet high, and the top was crowned by a grove of knotty, gnarled old pines. If he could gain their shelter unseen, he could be comfortably sure of remaining so.

There was a jungle of cactus to the right. He located a break in the gray-green wall, turned into it daintily, and parked the long-suffering sedan where it would not be noticed from the road.

Not a soul was in sight. He might have thought he had Lower California to himself but for faint sounds of human activity which came from the direction of the gulf. Distant voices, and mixed with them the rattle of chains and the clank of machinery.

"The cannery, I expect. The cannery—and what else?" His right hand went back to touch his hip-pocket, though the weight of his automatic was proof enough of its presence. Just for luck, and thinking of poor Harry Bishop, he took it out and made sure it was in readiness for use in case any big scorpions settled away at his swift approach, and at least one side-winder rattled an angry warning at him to watch his step.

He reached the base of the hill with no more than these reptilian alarms. He began the steep ascent, climbing fairly quickly till he was within a few feet of the top. Then he crouched and went the rest of the way on hands and knees. He came to the grove of pine, crawled through it to its farther edge, and dropped flat on his stomach in as nice a front-line observation post as nature ever devised.

Stretched before him was the blue-green expanse of the Gulf, glistening and twinkling in the reflected rays of sunlight. Across the water, nearly ten miles distant at this point, was the hazy shore of Mexico, barren, sandy and with no sign of habitation.

These details held Allan's attention no more than an instant. What he was interested in

Lady Aussie in Wartime

Tells Americans How Australia Girds for War

By MARGARET KERNOULE

Wide World Features Writer

Meet Australia's woman of the hour, Mrs. Herbert Evatt. Her unheralded arrival in America with her husband, Australia's foreign minister and attorney general, holds as much drama for Australians as did the landing of Mrs. MacArthur in the land down under.

When I met American-born Mrs. Evatt in her New York hotel suite shortly after she stepped into this country from an exciting (censored, censored) trip, she made it clear that American women can expect to take an increasingly important part in this state of total war.

She has golden blonde hair, dimples and dignity.

She is vice president of the Woman's Auxiliary National Service of Australia's capital, Canberra, and has been serving as liaison officer between the WANS and the government.

Her political knowledge she gained from her attorney general husband. Before the war, her main interests were politics and painting.

Good Luck Charm

For good luck on her trip she wore a heavy silver pin bearing her husband's family crest with the motto "Be Brave and Wise."

All Australian women are now registered for war service, says Mrs. Evatt. This registration provides a permanent list from which workers can be selected as needs come along. Some work full time, some part time, but Mrs. Evatt, who was working herself when she got an hour and a half notice to leave for America, says every woman is doing some kind of war work. Everyone, she insists, is ready to move instantly.

All she brought with her was a small handbag containing lingerie, gown, toothbrush, one thin frock, aspirin, a tiny first-aid kit, powder and lipstick. She forgot her cold cream.

She shopped for one smart but simple evening gown in New York.

The most important job of Australian women is keeping lines of communication open. Bikes are the thing wherever home mail falls.

Youngsters Help, Too

The ambition of children like the Evatts' ten-year-old daughter Rosalind (who like every other Australian youngster is busy with junior Red Cross schedule) is to be old enough to join the Bike Corps. Their son, Peter, is in the armed forces.

"Until recently the hardest thing we had to do was to learn to ride in the dark," says Mrs. Evatt. "Now there's a new teaser: to tackle a gas producer (one of those charcoal burning automobiles). They're a bit difficult to drive, and picking up a sack of charcoal to pitch into the tank before the flame goes out is a problem."

Training women for driving big buses, trucks, ambulances, and all kinds of vehicles has proved particularly valuable, she said. Even the car from Government House is operated by a woman now.

Australian households now have no servants because everyone works for war. Entertainment has taken a trend to simplification: no big parties, no full evening clothes, simple food, everything planned to save expense, labor and time.

The only clothing shortage in Australia at present is silk stockings, says Mrs. Evatt. Women solved that problem in the summer season just ended by going bare-legged. Australian women frown on uniforms unless they are necessary. They are going in for simpler clothes, but they're still feminine and attractive. Australia's woman of the hour is proof of that.

Steno in War Job Is Urged to Stick to It; She's a Soldier

By RUTH MILLETT

News from Washington says that there is a "terrific turnover" among the girls who go there to take war-

Patty Shells
Make up extra crust into patty shells when pie-making. Bake and when meal time comes the shells can be filled with fresh or canned fruits, prune or apricot whip, leftover frozen or gelatin dessert. time jobs.
The turnover at some agencies among stenographers, typists, and messengers amounts to "100 per cent."

It seems a great number of girls go to Washington to get a job, try it for a week or two and then get lonesome and go back home. (The main trouble seems to be the fact that there are about eight girls for every single man in Washington these days.)

That fast turnover costs the government plenty in money and in slowed up work. But the girls don't seem to mind.

That doesn't speak very well for the attitude of America's young women—compared with that of her young men.

Boys of the same age as these girls aren't being so choosy about the kind of work they are doing these days. Uncle Sam is bossing their lives, using them however he sees fit, and they are not kicking.

Boys Have to Take It
Their living conditions probably are not any better than those in crowded Washington. And when it comes to finding girls to date, they would feel lucky if there were one girl to every eight men around an army camp.

And their work is really work—not anything as physically easy as typing or carrying messages.
So, the girls look pretty silly deciding not to work for the government—when the know how badly the government needs them—just because living in Washington isn't quite as exciting as they thought it was going to be.

If women are going to be that frivolous and unpatriotic in their attitude toward war work, probably conscription of women would be a good thing.

Dog Trainer

Flash, a white German shepherd dog, is as capable a hand as R. J. Rossi has in his Tropical Park stable. Dog leads Valdina Rebel from stall for an excursion around walking ring.

UNCLE SAM'S 'INVASION TROOPS' MAKE A PRACTICE LANDING

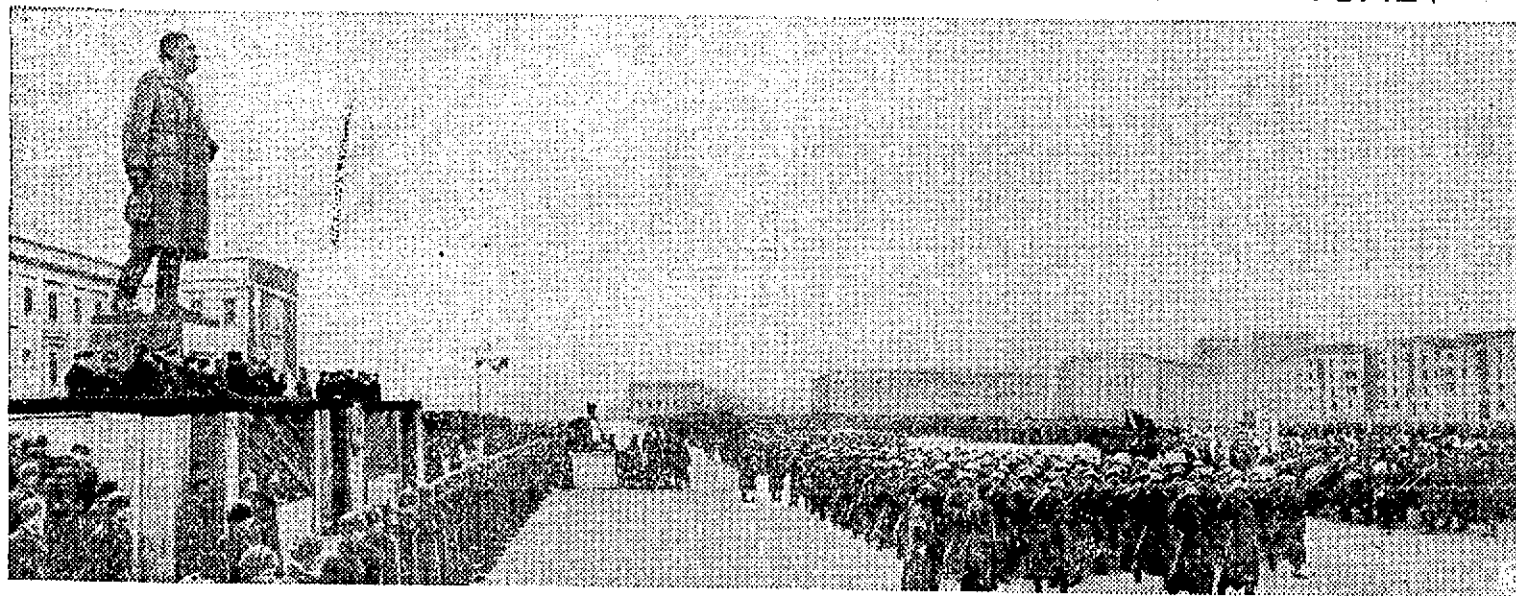

Troops of the 9th infantry division, being trained in landing operations and establishment of bridgeheads, paddle toward shore under simulated artillery fire during drill near Fort Bragg, N. C. Boats carry 10 soldiers each.

Hazard in Hawaii

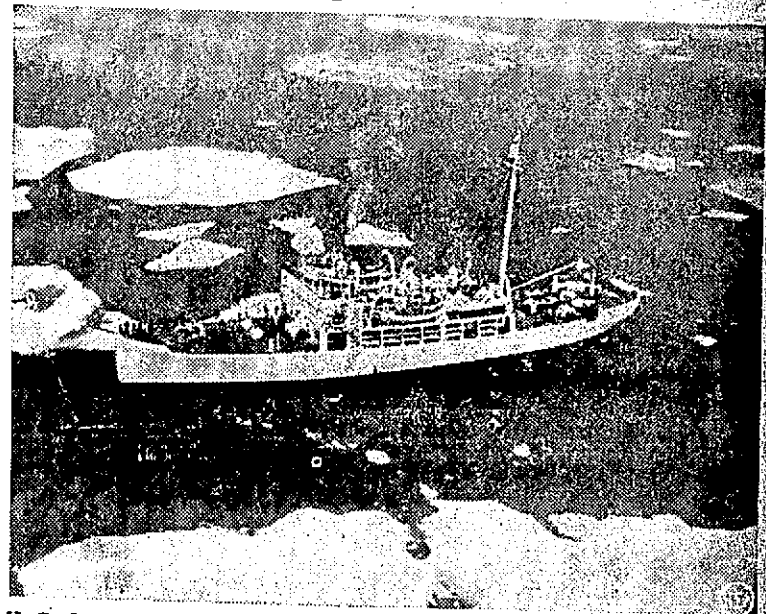

Honolulu Wilma Bell finds her golf ball in a new type of hazard—a metal pipe, one of many scattered over Hawaiian courses to prevent landings by enemy planes.

RUSSIANS STILL PARADE . . . THIS ONE'S IN KUIBYSHEV

The battling Russians still love those mass ceremonies. Here's a big parade in Kuibyshev, provisional capital, celebrating a revolutionary holiday.

Signs of Spring in North Atlantic

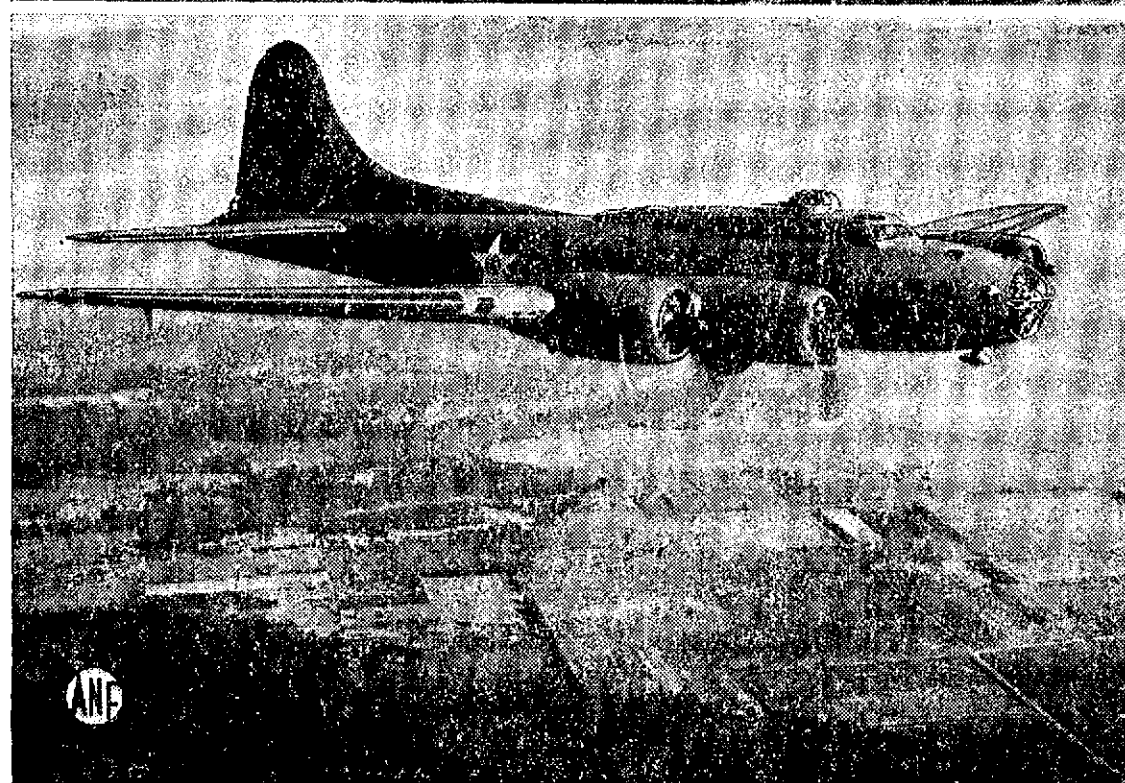

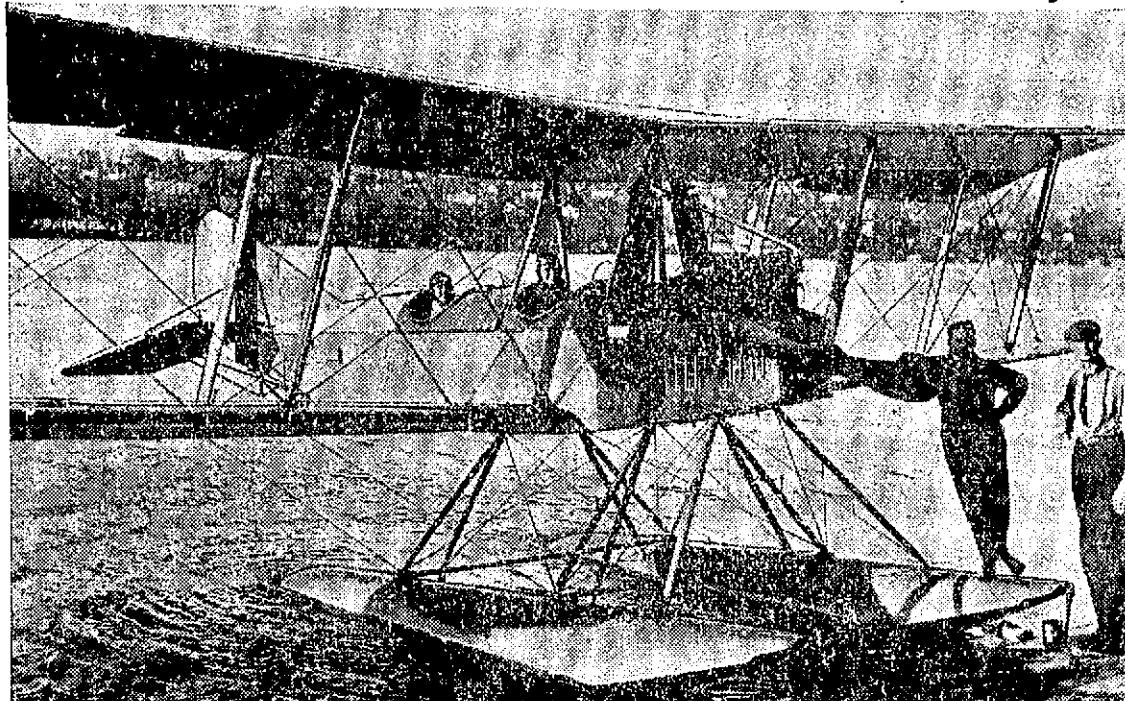

U. S. Coast Guard cutter Northland on patrol finds the ice breaking up in a Greenland fjord not far from north Atlantic convoy route.

MacArthur Alert in France---1918

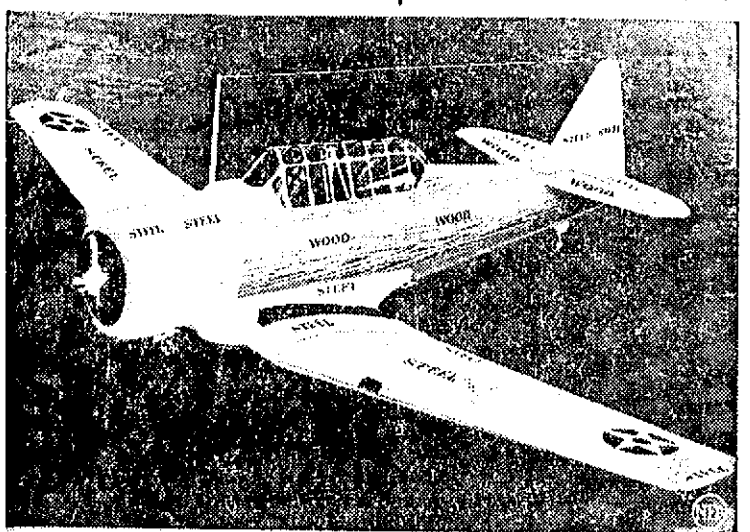

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, then a colonel, cast a wary eye skyward as he stood with members of his staff to watch Rainbow (42nd) Division maneuvers at Baccarat, France, in May, 1918. Today, a quarter-century later, he is maneuvering for an offensive from Australia.

1918 . . . THEN AND NOW . . . 1942

Two wars . . . airplanes . . . and graphic evidence of the amazing progress made by the American aircraft industry. (Top)—the Boeing Model C seaplane trainer of 1918 in which many an American aviator of World War I earned his wings. (Bottom)—one of the hardest hitting aerial weapons ever devised, the Boeing B-17E Flying Fortress heavy bomber of World War II. The Model C, typical of the "stick and wire" construction of 24 years ago, had a top speed of 70 miles per hour. The performance of the Wright-powered B-17E is a military secret, but in raids by Britain's R.A.F. earlier versions of this air giant have struck from the stratosphere at speeds four times that of the 1918 trainer. Both pictures from Aviation News Committee.

Wood and Steel Replace Aluminum

Sections of a North American advance trainer are marked off to show parts which may be replaced by wood and low alloy steel.

Go To CHURCH On EASTER SUNDAY AND EVERY SUNDAY

*Find Courage .... Peace ....
Hope .... In Church*

There are so few things to hold on to these days—material values, mental conditions change rapidly... affected directly and quickly by the strife, turmoil and economical upheavals of recent years. There is one thing left unshaken—the solace and peace to be found in church. Come to Church Easter Sunday—find stable spiritual values which, in the last analysis, are enduring in peace or war, or times of sadness. Go to the church of your choice... Easter Sunday and every Sunday—you need the comfort and companionship to be found there... the churches need your support. Go to church Easter Sunday in the traditional American way... to celebrate this great day in accordance with your beliefs. It's a perfect way to begin the day—and you'll enjoy the Easter parade more afterwards. You will find a warm welcome at any of Hope's many fine churches—and you'll find great benefit in the special Easter Sunday services planned by each. Come to church Easter Sunday.
